Cross The Brand New Heavies and Rickie Lee Jones, throw in some 70s family groove, and you get blue number nine – diverse and eclectic songs laid down with infectious energy - a first-rate debut, fun, honest and catchy. The musicianship sparkles throughout, and Stefanie Seskin proves to be a wordsmith of much wit. As she said in a recent interview, Seskin writes about life's ups and downs, mostly from her experience but then often taken beyond reality in the style of Magical Realism which she studied in college - the tongue in cheek analogies of sweet sugar honey - the sassy funkiness of Hook In - the hopeful determination in Cog in a Wheel. The balance of the songs are equally engaging, from lilting melodies to jazzy funk, pensive and intimate to silly and fun, blue number nine's music invites you to dance or to linger, ponder, and smile knowingly before moving on. A terrific first outing from a fine and accomplished group whose current creations are proof positive that their future bears watching. (blue number nine exclusively uses Ultimate Support stands.)
