blue number nine's third release was created by the band. the group had a very limited budget to record on a shoestring (hence the title), but was resourceful enough to tackle the engineering, mastering and artwork themselves on home computers. The result is a finished product they are all very proud of.

Recorded and produced in the group's own Concussion Studios in Jersey City, NJ, this is more than a simple home recording. With horn arrangements and a catchy groove "You'll Know What To Do" evokes the mood and groove of Motown. "Who Are The Free" is a political song containing a sample of a Noam Chomsky speech with a fat and funky bass line. "It's All About" is a soulful bass driven song about being strong and making good choices. Overall, the sound quality is excellent and the songs are unique and cleverly written. BestFemaleMusicians.com describes the CD as "fun to listen to, musically and lyrically intelligent and a real keeper." (blue number nine exclusively uses Ultimate Support stands. Drummer Jack Gourdine is endorsed by Grover Pro percussion.)
